Judge T. G. He has found that in the majority of cases Mexican bridegrooms bring to the marriage altar brides who are older in years than the grooms themselves. That trait is not noticeable in any other nationality, the judge finds, as in the big majority of cases the bridegrooms are older than the brides. Just why the Mexicans should prefer a wife older is not quite clear, at least to this matrimonial court.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

INDOMITABLE INDUSTRY

THE smiling bow-boy who thrills the hearts of young lads and lasses and warms the souls of sentimental mankind, from the budding sapling to the withered tree of old age, never misses an hour in pulling his bowstring and shooting his fatal arrows.

His work is so delightful, so exceedingly full of exquisite variation and change that the mere suggestion to him of a vacation would instantly sadden his cheerful countenance.

He finds his greatest happiness in indomitable industry.

He is constantly drawing his bow and twanging his string.

As fast as he flings his arrows the game dissolves into an eternity of bliss. Then other game comes over the hill and that, too, is hurried off to meet its joyous fate.

Since the day when Eve gave Adam the apple, and bade him eat, the bow-boy has kept steadily at his work. Neither the tide nor the wind is more regular in its performance.

He made his advent before the unions were dreamed of, yet he is directly responsible for more unions than any other agent on earth.

He works because of his love of work. He sticks to it for the all-sufficient reason that in employment he finds his own greatest delight.

The truth is that if he were to discontinue his occupation the world would soon lose its prized romance, its dreams of conquest, its visions of home, its tenderness, its stirring emotions and the immortality of love.

WHO SAID

"Resignation is a daily suicide."

WHEN one gives up fighting and resigns himself to his fate, he has, to all intents and purposes, committed suicide. That is the sum and substance of the words quoted above, which came from the pen of the great French writer, Honore de Balzac.

Balzac, who is famous as the author of many novels which rank as classics, was born at Tours, France, in the year 1799. Before completing his twenty-fourth year he had published a number of novels under various noms de plume but none were attended by any great success. In the year 1829, he published his novel, "Le Dernier Chouan, a Tale of La Vendee." This was the first work to which he attached his name and the sensation which is aroused brought him fame.

A much greater degree of success attended the publication of Balzac's next work, "Physiologie de Mariage," which is noted for its piquant and caustic observations on human nature. All the works of Balzac are characterized by the close observation of human nature which is to be noted in this work. The genius of Balzac is marked by his distinct, although sometimes exaggerated, delineation of character.

Among the best-known works of this writer are, "Scenes de la Vie Parisienne," "Scenes de la Vie de Province," "Le Pere Goriot" and "Le Medecin de Campagne."

The last named work translated is "The Country Doctor," the publication of which brought Balzac into correspondence with the Countess Eveline de Hanska. This woman is the "Polish Lady" to whom Balzac dedicated his "Moderate Mignon," written in 1844. Fifteen years later he was united in marriage with this same heroine of his literary work.

Balzac's death occurred in the year 1850.

Mother's Cook Book

Who does not do some creative work with brain or hands, lives a mendicant, dies a pauper, and lies buried in the potters' field, no matter what mausoleum marks his tomb.—Dallas Lore Sharp.

A FEW PIES

PIE has been called the Great American Dessert for it is one of the most popular of all desserts.

There are any number of fillings which may serve in a baked shell, cover with a meringue or whipped cream and serve. Such pastry, as it has but one crust, is better for anybody, as rich pastry is hard to digest.

Banana Pie.

Line a pie plate with pastry and bake for twelve minutes. Cream together one tablespoonful of butter and three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, add two egg yolks beaten slightly, one-third of a cupful of flour, three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water and cook in a double boiler until thickened. Cool and add a few drops of vanilla. Peel and slice three large bananas, putting a layer in the bottom of the pastry shell and covering with cream filling; spread another layer of the bananas and finish the top with cream. Cover with a meringue made of the two egg whites with four tablespoon-

Remove the bow-boy from the stage of life and in a little while the whole human family would be at war and in tatters; a few years more and humans would become extinct.

Just as industry keeps the bow-boy always happy, so does it give happiness to others.

Why is it then that, while the world is calling for workers there are so many apostles of laxity, afraid to soil their hands or tire their brains?

By work we rise to eminence. By idleness we sink to despair.

If we should look through the mazes in quest for truth we would find that well-directed effort, whether of hand or brain, is most honorable, made so by a higher power to bring about our earthly joys to develop our latent abilities, our self-respect, and to fit us for the more beautiful life to come, which even the idler, if pushed hard in argument, will shamefacedly admit.

THINGS DESIRED

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WITH all things unattainable, I used to dream the maddest things: I, too, would have a citadel amid the company of kings.

When not a thing a man may own Why dream of that? Nay, dream of stone!

And build your castles all a-gleam, For, after all, it's all a dream.

Yet, for the merry and the bold, the poorest fortunes often mend: One day I found a pot of gold awaiting at the rainbow's end.

When I might dream a thing or two, Yes, almost anything came true, When one so poor was rich again, What think you that I dreamed of then?

With all things unattainable, I used to dream of castled kings; But now, it's rather strange to tell, I dream of very simple things:

When anything I well might own I do not dream of walls of stone, For now I want a roof of thatch, A humble home, and friends to match.

IS IT POLK?

SIX of the Presidents of the United States have been of Scotch-Irish origin. There have been three pure Scotch, one Welsh and two Dutch. The rest as far as paternal ancestry goes have been English.

James K. Polk was one of the six Scotch-Irish. He was born in Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, one of the ten children of a farmer whose ancestors had come to this country in the eighteenth century. It is no wonder that we look in books of the surnames of the British Isles for Polk. The fact is that the ancestral name of the eleventh President of the United States was not Polk at all, but Pollock.

Pollock and Pollock are said to have been given first to a native of Poland and to prove this authorities cite the fact that Shakespeare, in the opening scene of the first act of Hamlet, uses the word in this way.

MANN—This may be a surname of the nickname class. Mann was used very frequently in the sense of servant or retainer. Thus we speak of master and man. If there were two men named John, one retained by the other, they would have been spoken of as John Master and John Man. This is one explanation of the name Mann. In other cases it may be a local name derived from Le Mans, in France.

AYRE—This name is said to have had derivation from a word meaning heir.

LEWIS—This is one of the most usual of surnames derived from first names, and it is said that the frequency of it in Wales is due to the fact that it was used as an equivalent of the very popular Llewellyn.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

DRESSING BEAUTY

When Beauty woke up in the morning, and after she had talked of some of the games she would have, she thought of getting up.

She did not think of it so very long before she decided it was really time to be getting dressed.

Then Beauty pulled a rope that was back of her bed, a heavy, silken rope.

Six little pages came rushing into the room.

Then six little fairies followed. They hovered about her, working very quickly, smiling as they worked, as though pleased with what they were accomplishing.

They bathed her in a warm pool which was just beyond her bedroom. Around the pool were heavy ferns and the blue stones that formed the groundwork of the pool made the water a clear, blue color.

Then they dressed her in the loveliest of clothes—clothes that were made of soft, shimmering materials, clothes that were of strange and wonderful colors blended together.

Blues and reds and oranges and ambers and pinks and soft, soft greens were the colors.

As she moved it seemed as though a creature wearing the colorful beauties of the world was moving.

They combed her hair which looked like the work of the sun, should the sun take to spinning.

And about it they wound a wreath of flowers from the woods, little delicate wild flowers, faintly scented, delicately petaled.

She looked at herself in the mirror again. Her skin was white and soft, and her cheeks just faintly pink as though apple blossoms and peaches had thrown to her, quite gently, a little of their hue.

Ah, yes, there was no mistake about it.

She was beautiful.

She was all that was beautiful. Every detail about her was perfect. Her throat was so lovely that it looked, in itself, like a song.

To look at it was almost like hearing exquisite, full-fluted notes.

Her arms were so rounded and smooth that should she have put them about you, you would have felt that Beauty had had you in her clasp and that you would come forth beautiful, too, from having felt so much beauty—in just the way that you feel when you see an exquisite sunset, or when the beautiful world seems to take you in her lovely hold.

Her grace was so rhythmical that as she walked it seemed as though the wind sang and that little birds were singing in low, thrilling notes.

She was Beauty.

And to her nothing else mattered. She thought she would wait, just a little, before going forth to play with her friends, the Sunlight, the Blue Sky, the Flowers of the garden and the others.

For all of these are Beauty's friends and playmates.

She would wait and see if she could not think up something quite new to do. She clasped her hands and bade her pages and the little fairy workers leave her while she thought.

At last she had decided. She would create a plan for world beauty.

"Beauty, I am Beauty," she said.

"It is the most important thing in all the world."

But Beauty had yet to learn many things. She had yet to learn that Beauty was very important in order to make the world beautiful and lovely but that it alone was not enough.

Yet Beauty was so young, so very, very young. And so very, very lovely!

Device That Gets Stronger Signals

Important Improvement in Tuned Radio Frequency Circuits.

When all of the better grade models of receiving sets are brought out this fall by the leading manufacturers it will be found that one of the principal improvements in the tuned radio frequency circuits will be the introduction of a 200,000-ohm variable resistance such as the centralab radiohm. Orders for more than a million of these radiohms from set manufacturers indicates the extent to which this method of controlling oscillation in radio frequency sets will be used.

With this improvement being made in the manufactured sets, there is no reason why the home set builder shouldn't take the same advantage. The accompanying diagram shows how the radiohm can be connected in series with the "B" battery lead to the plates of the radio frequency tubes. A bypass condenser of from one-half to one mfd, indicated by "C," is necessary between the negative filament lead and the primary of the radio frequency transformer.

Perfect Control of Tubes. The purpose of making this change is to give perfect control of the tubes on all wave lengths. This tube control is vitally important. It has long been known that a set which will not whistle or squeal under certain conditions will not produce volume or distance.

This whistle is actually caused by the carrier wave of an incoming signal combining with the high frequency wave generated in the set when the tubes are operated in a state of oscillation. For clear reception the tubes should be just below this point. In addition to causing whistles and squeals, the music or speech received will be mushy and distorted when the tubes are oscillating.

Control of Receiver. Many types of receivers, of which the neutrodyne and tuned radio frequency types predominate, oscillate readily and require some means of control. Attempts to make receivers nonoscillating by means of small fixed condensers or by reducing the number of turns in the transformer primaries, are successful only at a sacrifice of volume and range. Over certain portions of the dial the set may operate satisfactorily, but over the whole range additional control of the tubes is necessary.

The majority of receiving sets are improperly neutralized or balanced. Faint signals can be brought in by turning up the rheostats, a poor and critical method of control, at best. By the use of a radiohm the receiver can be controlled on all wave lengths with the noiseless variable resistance.

Curious Beliefs

Regarding Snakes

In spite of the great decrease in the number of British reptiles, many superstitions and charms regarding snakes still exist.

The most potent charm against snakes is said to be a milpreve. Really, it is a piece of coralline limestone about the size of a pigeon's egg. Old-fashioned people believe that on one night in the year all the adders meet together and start hissing. Their breath forms a bubble which solidifies into the milpreve. Whoever finds it is assured of good luck and immunity from snake bite.

Another superstition is that the breath of snake on a hazel wand will produce a hard stone ring which is an infallible remedy for snake bite.

Many country folk believe that an ash tree will keep off snakes. A peasant couple were horrified to find that their baby shared its morning bowl of milk with an adder. They tied an ash twig round the child's neck, and the snake never came near it again. But the child pined away and died, becoming the loss of its playfellow, of which it had become very fond, says London Tit-Bits.

Beneath a wind-whipped path that sometime led
By shattered precipice to Loma's head?
Lost gulls? But strong men's lives these walls have known!
And woman's song was here. What undertone
Of busy days still echoes! Are they dead—
Those lives you cannot touch? Those hearts now fled, Oblivion-wrapped and silent . . . overthrown?

Find me a rust-red trail they used to know,
By lupins marked, by sea-embittered rue.
It was a trail where—candles in a row—
White-branched the yucca lilies stood; where flew Old gulls like these gulls crying; here, where go
These tides: blue-silver pouring to sky-blue.

EDITORIAL

OUR FOURTH BIRTHDAY

Accentuating an anniversary announcement, this is the true tale of a birthday celebration this week that was crowded out of the customary social columns.

It marks the commencement of the fourth year of "The Beach News" at its home, 4829 Saratoga avenue, Ocean Beach, California.

The decorations show a demure color scheme of black and white and this motif is carried out consistently even down to the finger-tips.

From its birth in November, 1922,
"The Beach News" always has been healthy and vigorous and has grown rapidly in size from a small four-column paper of four pages to its present status of a standard six-column modern weekly newspaper of eight pages. And it is most pleasing to record that its sturdy growth has been largely due to the excellent nourishment afforded by its hosts of valued patrons, all of whom, individually and collectively, form happy family participants in this fourth progressive celebration of "The Beach News" with

KIRK AND KATHERINE.

RECEIVED WITH THANKS

We appreciate the courtesy of Superintendent Henry C. Johnson in forwarding to "The Beach News" his printed report upon the San Diego City Schools, containing also a review of the six-year period from July 1, 1919, to July 1, 1925. The book of forty-eight pages, with a very suitable cover, is an excellent product of the high school printing department. A current directory of the city schools has also reached us in good shape. Many thanks, Mr. Johnson.

The student body and a representative delegation of visitors and of-presentation. Excerpts: Edgar E.

Hastings made an appropriate speech mal donation of the flag, which was accepted by Principal Pete W. Ross

REV. DECLAN E. FOLEY

PRESENTED WITH FINE PURSE
ON HIS DEPARTURE

On last Sunday at the Sacred Heart Catholic church, Rev. D. E.
Foley bade his parishioners adieu.
For five years he has labored in this section, and through his untiring zeal and activity he has left a record of work well done, especially in enlarging and beautifying Sacred Heart church, which is a most creditable asset to the community. Yet, more than all, Father Foley has left behind him a monument of deep affection and regard enshrined in friendly hearts that time cannot efface.

On last Saturday evening he was taken by surprise when a representative committee of the parish presented him with a fine, well-filled purse, which he deeply appreciated, not so much for the material offering as the unanimous good feeling and sincere esteem of his parishioners here and in Roseville.

Leaving Ocean Beach, Father Foley carries with him the respect and good will of all, irrespective of class or creed, and everyone wishes him
Godspeed in his new sphere of labor.

LITTLE TANG-U—THE RAT

By LAWRENCE E. ADAMS

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

AMONG the most interesting souvenirs that Marston, the naval officer, brought from the Orient was a curious portrait, evidently the work of a native artist, painted in brilliant colors on a panel of foreign wood. More striking than the workmanship of the portrait, however, was its subject, a small Chinese boy, apparently not more than ten or twelve years of age, but wearing the uniform of a high Japanese naval officer, and adorned with a whole string of jeweled decorations.

Here is the history of the portrait: When the Japanese flag-ship steamed out of the harbor of Canton on the day that war was formally declared between Japan and China, it carried one human being whose name was not on the ship's rolls—and he belonged to the enemy. He became a passenger under the following circumstances: Just before the ship weighed anchor a small steam launch was sent back for the commander and superior officers, who had been detained until late. Among these officers were three Americans, all graduates of the Annapolis academy, who had been engaged by the Japanese government as advisers during the coming hostilities. As the little launch wobbled its way through the maze of picturesque craft and sampans—the curious little Chinese houseboats—which crowded the bay, the eyes of the American officers were riveted by a curious sight. To the top of a wooden stake to which a sampan was moored a little Chinese boy clung, swaying to and fro, eyeing delightedly the steam launch as it shot through the water. In his anxiety to see the fun, however, he had disregarded the weakness of this reedlike support, which, when a passing sampan collided with it, suddenly broke off short, plunging the little chap into the water. At first the launch's passengers paid slight attention to the accident, knowing that these little natives are as much at home in the water as on shore. Indifference, however, gave way to concern when the child's shrill cry for help rang through the air, followed by the mad efforts of every sampan man within sight to get away from the drowning boy, instead of to him. It was now evident that the little fellow had become entangled in a floating coil of rope, and that his drowning was a matter of a few seconds; yet not one of the Chinese boatmen but watched from a distance and in silence the small hero's frantic struggles for life. Indeed, the little Mongolian was already disappearing in the waters of the bay when the steam launch, at the signal of the commander, veered in its course, and a strong arm snatched the little body from the waves. As for the sampan men, they watched the rescue with cries of amazement. This was because of the curious law existing in certain provinces of China that whosoever saves a life, the rescued one may lawfully look to the rescuer for support forever after. It is plain that this barbaric edict virtually puts a premium on death; but the explanation lies in the fatalistic religion, which holds that whenever a man falls into peril it is by the express wish and will of the gods, and that to rescue him is to obstruct their just decrees.

Meantime the officers, who had arrived on shipboard with their protegee before it had occurred to them to plan for his disposal, were examining their find as though he had been a new and curious toy. To send him back to shore was impossible, as they were already steaming out of the harbor. The only course, then, was to keep him on board, at least during the voyage to Japan, a plan rendered all the easier by the fact that the little heathen was, according to his broken Japanese, both homeless and friendless. But if the boy had seemed a nuisance in prospect, he was anything but that in reality. Shrewd as any Bovey ragamuffin, the little fellow's alert ways and quick wits were the unfailing delight of the three American officers. More imitative, even, than the Japanese, he picked up their language and customs with such incredible ease that in a few days he was more Japanese than any subject of the mikado. Indeed, before many weeks had passed, the entire crew was accustomed to the curious spectacle of one of the enemy enjoying the oriental marked attention and hospitality that the ship could afford.

But, besides his imitableness and shrewdness, the little Mongolian had one accomplishment that gained the awe-struck admiration of his oriental friends. That was the power of discovering objects at incredible distances as easily by night as by day, a power due partly to inheritance, and partly to his profession. The lad was an interesting specimen of the oriental class of beings known as rat catchers. This means more than the word implies. They are not rat catchers by vocation alone, but, strangely enough, they are born to the trade. In addition to many other talents which he had inherited from a long line of rat-catching ancestry, little Tang-u—the "rat"—as the boy was called, had the power of seeing his way clearly in almost the dead blackness of night. Sometimes, indeed, it seemed as though he was endowed with a sixth sense in this matter, being able to walk straight into a dungeon-like room and to bring forth any object without the least hesitancy. Courage, also, he had developed to a rare degree, for the rats in the docks, and in the underground passages from warehouse cellar to cellar, and sewer to sewer, where he plied his trade, are the fattest and most savage of the rodent tribe the world over; so large, indeed, that the skins of two of them will make a pair of gloves, and the carcass will supply a family with dried fillet de rodent for a week. These rat catchers spend days and weeks in the underground passages, and day and night are almost the same to them.

Now that he could no longer exercise his strange gift in his accustomed way, Tang-u would often amuse himself by standing for hours on the deck, peering out through the mist or the darkness in search of things hidden to common eyes. Indeed, among the Americans he soon became known as the "kid with the telescopic eyes," while the commander, on various occasions, allowed him to accompany the men in the lookout, where he discovered objects often in advance of the field glass. Even the dark waters of the ocean were not proof against the vision of the little heathen, whose bright eyes would detect curious fish as they swam around the ship, many feet below the surface; while a fog that blinded the ordinary eye proved no obstacle to his keen sight. Before long every one came to the conclusion that a boy whose eye was equal to a combined field glass and searchlight was a valuable addition to a modern warship; and on more than one occasion during the months of the war the little Chinaman's discernment was appealed to as gravely as though he had been thirty years' old and a Japanese officer, instead of a ten-year-old Chinaman.

On one occasion, indeed, Tang-u's sixth sense made him for five minutes the ship's commander.

It was late in the evening before the memorable engagement of Port Arthur. The flag-ship, which, having passed unscathed through months of war, had been recently ordered to this stronghold, had just anchored in the harbor, and preparations were making for the night's defense. The torpedo net had not yet been lowered, but the whole ship resounded with the bustle and hurry of preparations for what every one felt would be the most decisive battle of the war. Meantime Tang-u stood alone near the bow, peering out through the darkness, as was his custom upon arriving in a strange place, in search for some new and interesting sight. Suddenly, above the confusion, there rang out a shrill little scream, and Tang-u, with his eyes bulging from his head, rushed toward the admiral, and, pointing out to sea, frantically shrieked: "Torpee-to! torpee-to!"

Instantly every eye followed the direction of the tiny finger. The sea looked untroubled. Not a soul on the deck, even by straining his vision to the utmost, could verify Tang-u's cry. Yet so accustomed had they become to relying upon the little fellow's keen sight that the admiral gave instant orders to lower the net. In a moment there was a sound of hurrying feet, a hundred hands were raised to the ropes, and the great net fell into place. Before the splash of the falling net had died away, there was a thundering explosion, and a tremendous upheaval of water, like that of a mighty geyser, shook the huge ship from bow to stern. It was indeed a torpedo that Tang-u's keen eyes had detected far away through the approaching night. But swiftly as it came, the boy's marvelous vision had been swifter. The well-aimed missile of destruction, that in a moment more would have destroyed the flower of the Japanese navy, had, in coming in contact with the netting, exploded harmlessly, flooding the deck with water. The great warship with over three hundred souls had been saved from annihilation—and by one of the enemy.

A few months later, when Tang-u's exploit was brought to the notice of the mikado, that dignitary conferred upon the little Chinese rat catcher the rank of honorary admiral in the Japanese navy.

And it was in this way that a heathen nation furnished the youngest naval hero in existence.

Whistler's Architect

Denied Immortality

Whistler's house in Chelsea, London, on which a memorial tablet is being fixed, recalls the episode of the artist's proposed residence in Tite street. He had acquired a piece of ground adjoining Chelsea hospital, and after prolonged wrangling with a long-suffering architect, departed for the south of France until the building operations were completed.

The result to Whistler on his return was agony. He stormed, he fumed, he attempted to repudiate the contract, but the architect was obdurate. He must accept possession and he must pay.

Whistler would not for a single day live in the house; but before selling it he had placed above the door a stone tablet with the inscription: "Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. Mr. X (the architect) built this house."

Nobody seems to know how or when the inscription was got rid of, but although the house still stands to offend the eye—a monstrosity in whitewash, the stone tablet above the door has been carefully razed and a no doubt wholly respectable profession is excluded from that particular class of the immortals whose immortality is none the less real for resting on the abuse of the great.—New York World

He Had Had Enough, and Announced Fact

Albert, age three, went with his mother to a family reunion. Music and speeches occupied the morning, and then, as the program grew to a satisfactory close, an old uncle rose to pronounce the benediction. Albert looked all around inquiringly, then seeing that his mother's head was bowed, lowered his own with a sigh and an air of forced resignation.

The benediction, characterized by faltering speech and many pauses, was long drawn out. The fact, together with certain mysterious sounds issuing from the direction of the dinner table spread beneath the trees nearby and a growing restlessness becoming evident in the crowd, were not lost on Albert. As the uncle reached the point of making his most touching appeal and absolute silence prevailed, Albert slid from his seat, clapping his hands loudly and shouting:

"I've had enough of that. Come on mother, dinner's ready!"—Indianapolis News.

MODES IN WINTER COATS; LATEST AFTERNOON FROCKS

STYLISTS had their doubts this fall as to whether women would accept flaring lines in coats, so they launched two silhouettes—the straight line and the flaring line. These, like the two Dromios, came into the world of fashion as brother and brother, and are journeying through it—"not one before the other, but hand in hand together." The doubts of the stylists were very well founded, but the flare has been gaining ground, especially the side flare which does not interfere with a straight back or front line. Fullness is added to some coats by means of flat plaits at the sides—a compromise between the straight and flaring styles, which has proved popular.

Two late models, shown in the illustration, introduce fullness at the sides

Although many of us looked askance at the new fall modes when they were first presented, and required them to be more or less disguised until we got used to them—all that is changed now. In language something like that of the poet, we first endured, then fitted, then embraced, the new elaboration, the fuller skirts, long sleeves and hint of form-fitting in the bodice.

Two charming afternoon frocks, as shown here, make clear the steps by which women were led to abandon the straight and narrow way of last season's styles. Easier and more flowing lines, much greater intricacy in cut and more elaboration distinguish the styles of today. Both the frocks pictured are made of crepe satin and may be developed in any color. The

Two of the New Winter Coats.

In very clever and becoming ways. One—at the left—by means of nolets finished by arrow heads, and the other by inserting a circular flounce below the hip line. The first model relies upon a fabric trim and fur collar and cuffs, for fashion's approval and the other puts its trust in buttons and fur. While coats may be greatly varied in design and ornamentation, few of them make a hazard of success without the company, of fur. The popular pile fabrics need only this final touch to make them as luxurious model at the left proclaims its up-to-dateness by its long sleeves, and novel cuffs, "waftle" tucks in the bodice, high and "V" shaped neckline and box-plaited skirt—which stops short of a flare but falls in easy lines. A contrasting color is used for piping and banding the cuffs, lining the belt and furnishing the collar, which is provided with ties of satin like that in the dress.

The new modes are gracefully interpreted in the dress at the right. This model has a long, flaring tunic with and becoming as fine fur coats. Fur has been used in many new and original ways on the dressier coats—as in wide borders made of square patches of fur separated by rows of cire braid, all making a blocked effect on the fabric of the coat, very deep borders of fur curving upward at the back, where they meet long, narrow bands running down a slightly molded bodice. Fur collars and revers and deep cuffs that reach nearly to the elbow are other noteworthy developments.

In sports and utility coats there are some smart leather trimmed models, simply cut on full easy lines.

VARIOUS WAYS OF USING SOY BEANS

Appreciated for Their High Food Value.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Soy beans have long been a staple food product in the Orient. As they are becoming better known in this country, and appreciated for their high food value, people are beginning to inquire as to the best ways of cooking them. The United States Department of Agriculture says that the yellow, brown and green varieties of soy beans are excellent for use as green vegetables, and can be cooked like lima beans or any other of the varieties of beans used green. Dried soy beans can be prepared in much the same way as navy and other dried beans. The soy beans, however, require longer soaking and much more cooking than the familiar varieties of beans. Either a pressure cooker or a fireless cooker can be used to advantage, therefore, in cooking them. In general, dried soy beans need to be soaked 24 hours and cooked for at least 2 hours. The time varies considerably with the dryness of the bean and its variety. It is better to simmer any soy beans than to boil them rapidly. Since the soy bean is very rich in fat, it does not require additional fat in cooking, but some persons prefer to add a little meat fat or butter because of the flavor.

Roasted soy beans are somewhat like roasted peanuts in flavor. Soak the beans over night. Boil them for one hour in salted water. Spread in a shallow pan, and roast in a moderate oven. Sprinkle them with salt while they are still warm.

The following recipes suggest uses for boiled soy beans:

Soy Bean Loaf.

2 cupsfuls boiled 1½ tablespoons soy beans flour
1 cupful bread ½ teaspoonful crumbs
1 cupful chopped 1 teaspoonful salt cooked celery ½ cupful milk

Scald the milk, add the flour which has been mixed with a little of the milk, and stir until thick. Mash or grind the soy beans; mix with the celery, thickened milk and seasonings and form into a loaf. Bake in a moderate oven.

Soy Bean Vegetable Soup.

2 cupsfuls boiled ½ cupful chopped soy beans celery
2 cupsfuls strained 2 ½ cupsfuls tomato pulp onion juice
2 cupsfuls water 1 teaspoonful salt
¼ teaspoonful 2 tablespoonsfuls pepper flour

Cook the celery in the water until tender. Add the tomatoes, bean pulp, and seasonings to the celery. Add the flour which has been mixed with a little water, and cook for twenty minutes.

Use for Leftovers

When you have two or three vegetable left over, even though there is but just a spoonful or two of each, combine them into a macedoine salad or a potato harlequin.

Provide Canned Corn to Help Out During Winter

Every housekeeper likes to have a few jars of canned corn among her reserve supplies, especially if the corn is grown in the home garden, but many do not feel quite confident about canning it properly. The United States Department of Agriculture says that corn can be safely and successfully canned at home if a steam pressure canner is used. Corn is one of the non-acid vegetables which should be processed at a temperature higher than 212 degrees Fahrenheit which is only possible under steam pressure.

The corn should, of course, be as fresh as possible when canned. Handle it within two hours after picking, if possible. To prepare it for canning, cut it from the cob without precooking. Add half as much boiling water as corn by weight and heat thoroughly. Pack it hot in the jars, add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart, and 2 teaspoonfuls of sugar if desired. Adjust the springs half way, or place screw tops on loosely, and completely seal tin cans before placing them in the canner, which should be hot. Process 80 minutes at 15 pounds pressure, or 250 degrees Fahrenheit.

In using the pressure canner, wait until steam flows fully from the pet cock before closing; otherwise the pressure is no indication of the temperature. Commence to count the time when the pressure reaches the desired point, not before.

Seal glass jars as soon as removed from the canner. The texture of products in tin is removed if the cans are cooled quickly by plunging in cold water. All cans and jars should be so marked that each lot can be identified. Keep them at room temperature for at least a week. Discard any showing signs of spoilage and watch others of the same lot until it is certain that they are keeping.

Homemade Soap Is Much Harder Than Store Kind

Perhaps you have wondered why some of your neighbors bother to make home-made soap when it can be purchased so easily. As families increase in size, Soap bills usually get to be quite an item, and home soap making will save $5 to $10 a year.

If you will save your grease and meat scraps you will be able to make dozens of bars of fine white soap. If you follow carefully the recipe on the lye label or one in the manufacturer's booklet, you will have splendid success. You will find that home-made soap is much harder and does not wash away so quickly as store soap.

Waste grease, as a rule, is of no value whatsoever except for soap making. When a sufficient quantity has been saved to combine with six cans of highest-test lye, you can make domestic soap at a cent a bar. On the basis mentioned you would have more than a hundred bars of pure soap, which would last the average family one year and would be worth over $6. If you try it once yourself you will be very much pleased with the results obtained.

DROP SHELF IN CLOSET SAVES BIG SPACE

A Closet Made into a Kitchen Cabinet—Showing Drop Shelf Down.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Having a closet containing a hinged shelf which can be let down to do duty as a counter or table is a good arrangement. Where there is not room for a kitchen cabinet the closet can be made to serve instead. With the shelf up, the door can be shut and the contents of the closet concealed effectively. The farmer's wife in Wythe county, Va., who planned this ingenious use of a closet entered her kitchen in the county better kitchen contest, under the terms of which each contestant was to make the most improvement possible for the least outlay. The contest was carried on under the co-operative direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The closet was fitted up with a hinged drop shelf which rested when down on an extension leg. The equipment and materials for baking were grouped together in front of the shelf, and a high stool was placed near by, ready for use. Groceries were kept on the shelves above, in cartons, glass jars, or other neat, tight, containers. Whatever could be hung up was placed on nails, on the door or the edges of the shelves. Cook books were kept in a rack on the door.

A dish closet with a drop shelf, close to the stove is a convenient place to keep cups and saucers, pitchers, bowls, or any other dishes that are often filled directly from the stove. When there is no need of using the shelf it is held up with a small wooden catch.

A homemade cabinet has a shelf, which is really a biscuit board. Chains hold it in place, and the tilting bins for flour and meal are also held by chains. The bins go back and the shelf drops down when not in use, covering the pot closet below. The same idea could be followed inside a closet. Precautions should be taken in any case to make the bins mouse and insect proof by fitting them with tight covers.

Whistling Saved Ship

How a man standing on the Hartlepool (England) breakwater guided a fishing vessel into harbor, during a dense fog by whistling was told at a meeting of the port and harbor commissioners. So dense was the fog that the captain could not see where he was. Then he heard some one whistling, and called out, "Where are you?" Ascertaining that the voice came from the breakwater, he told the man to keep on whistling while he got his bearings. The man did so, and the vessel steamed safely into harbor.

THANKSGIVING

Written for "The Beach News" by Mary Elizabeth Calder

What am I thankful for? Why, my dear,
For every day throughout the year!
For sunshine, flowers,
Welcome showers,
Bird-songs that charm my listening ear.

For health and hope, for work and play,
And the rest that comes at the close of day;
For joys and sorrows,
Glad tomorrows,
Kind friends to greet me on Life's Highway.

I'm thankful just for the joy of living,
Thus, every day is a glad Thanksgiving!

EDITOR DEAN HITS

THE NAIL ON THE HEAD

Editor Dean of the Glendora Gleaner recently improved the opportunity to say:

"A newspaper has only its space and subscriptions to sell. The advertising is its main source of revenue. And we want to state emphatically that it takes a lot of it to pay expenses and a moderate living to the proprietor. And right here is where a lot of people are not informed as to the need of paid advertising. They seem to think that space can be given to anybody who has some personal matter they want brought before the people. This newspaper has repeatedly given several notices running from four inches long to half a column for some public affair free, and then seen every dollar of job printing for the affair sent to another shop, where it was paid for. They wonder why we don't enthrone the next time they want a little space and 'please put it on the front page.' We ask in all seriousness, is this fair? We try to treat everybody fairly, and we expect the same treatment.

"The Gleaner gives many columns of space every week to some worthy cause, and we are glad to do it. We want to boost every worthy effort along any line and we are getting out as good a weekly as any town of like support.

"We seldom say a word of a personal nature in our columns, but believe it was needed just now to clean up some wrong thinking among a few people."

REAL MONEY PROPOSED

A gold-silver dollar with silver to take most of the wear and enough gold to give intrinsic value without the objectionable silver dollar size and weight, is said to be under consideration by the Treasury Department. The new silver-gold alloy would give a coin of a distinctive color, portable size and convenient to use.

The public is constantly told that our precious metal mining industry is declining. No better step could be taken to encourage it than to again popularize the use of metal for monetary purposes. Industrial activity all over the world is putting lead, zinc and copper mining back on its feet. By circulating more real metal money and less paper, the dwindling supply of precious metals will be augmented by increased prospecting and production.

POINT LOMA VICTORIES!

The history classes were shown "The Pilgrims," a short picture depicting the landing of the Pilgrims and their hardships in New England. This film, among many others, was prepared by Yale university. The settings, the costumes and the characters were all historically correct.

SHAGS

The Shags—the "big boys" of the school—held their meeting last Friday, Nov. 13. Sixty-four members were present, making a total larger than any other club in the school.

R. Berkely, "Big Shag," presided over the meeting with admirable perseverance, silencing one and all with grave and judicial appearance. The Shags are contemplating a stag party, and details were discussed. Mr. Roberts, chairman of the committee, disclosed the fact that boxing and wrestling bouts would be held, but he refused to disclose the program for the latter part of the meeting. "Come and see," were his words. Let's do!

NOON RALLIES

On the day of the football games it has been the practice at Point Loma High to have a "rally" at noon. The rally last Wednesday was taken over by the football men themselves, as last Wednesday's game marked the end of the football schedule. Catch Foots acted as yell leader, while the girls' gym class imitated the football team in action.

BOY SCOUTS

The Boy Scout troop at Point Loma High has been progressing rapidly within the last month. Mr. Klaus, teacher of mathematics, has taken charge of the Boy Scouts, and under his leadership they are becoming more and more enthusiastic in Scout work.

The Scouts put on the rally last Friday, the 13th, and considering the date and the day, they did exceptionally well.

Nov. 13 and Nov. 18 are dates long to be remembered, for Point Loma's warriors scored two victories. On the 13th of this month Roosevelt came prepared to find an easy victim, but in the first quarter of the game Point Loma showed the Bears their mistake, for the ball was put over for six points. The only time that Roosevelt ever threatened the local's goal was in the last quarter, when the Bears' team advanced by leaps and bounds, using that simple "pushing" formation known as the "centre rush." The Roosevelt warriors were butter-fingered, however, and a fumble saved the game for Point Loma—the final score being 6-0.

Last Wednesday, however, showed the locals in their best form, and they scored not once, but four times. Woodrow Wilson team was decidedly weak, for Dyer, fullback, made yards practically every time he received the ball.

The first quarter started the slaughter, for Dyer, the star of the game, made two touchdowns, making the score at the end of the first quarter 13-0.

The second quarter saw no points added to Point Loma's score, yet the period was decidedly in Point Loma's favor.

The third quarter was practically used in kicking, both sides putting twice; yet J. O'Mara, half, saw time to make a touchdown and add six more points to Point Loma's score.

In the fourth quarter O'Mara again starred, this time making the full seven points.

The final score was 26-0 in Point Loma's favor. This was the last game of the football schedule.

The backfield stars in the last game were Driscoll, Losey, Dyer and O'Mara; while the linesmen who drew praise for their efforts were Stevens (captain), Jones, Nelson, Markel, Justice, Bunham, Schenkel, Berkeley, Harrison and Hughes.

THE PENCIL MAKES A FARM PAY BETTER

Farm Accounting Reveals Losing Methods and Points Way to Bigger Profits.

(From Banker-Farmer)

A farm cannot properly be called successful unless it pays a fair rate of interest on the investment and returns fair wages for the farmer's labor. Agriculture is considered by all odds the most important industry in the world, and yet in no other industry is the business end so neglected.

It is common to find a farmer with an investment of fifteen to twenty thousand dollars, yet does he keep books? Perhaps he may jot down a note now and then of an important deal, but this is of no value in an analysis of his business as a whole. No other industry, however small, is carried on without books of some sort.

Farming is a business and to be successful must be conducted in a businesslike way. The business man's mind should have indelibly printed upon it two questions: What profit is my business making? How can that profit be increased? To know the latter, one must find out the former; and to find out about profits requires the keeping of books.

It is not necessary for a farmer to have a course in bookkeeping. Almost every agricultural college in the country has issued a simplified farm accounting book which it sells at cost, and only a few minutes are required each day to jot down the day's happenings.

Accounts Increase Profits
Instances number a thousandfold where farmers have profited by knowing their business. Accounts kept by nineteen farmers in Illinois led them to improve the organization and operation of their farms in ways that added approximately $650 to their average net income in 1922, the seventh year they had kept accounts.

An Iowa farmer found at the end of the first year he kept books that crops fed to livestock brought more money than when sold outright. His figures showed that his cows were poor; compared with other farms in the state, he found the number of acres cultivated per man on his farm, as well as the number of acres per horse, were below average. He rented more land and replanned his fields, so that the crop areas per man and horse were increased. He sold some of his scrubs and bought good cows. The second year his income from the farm, after paying all expenses and interest on the money invested, had been increased over $350.
